FREE building seminar for contractors coming to Bundaberg!

Contractors in the Bundaberg region are invited to update their building knowledge for FREE at a Contractor Education Seminar on Thursday 12 March 2009.

The program combines DVDs and advice from technical experts about common building defects.

Building Services Authority (BSA) general manager Ian Jennings said during the building industry downturn, contractors who attend a seminar can learn to avoid costly defects.

“Doing the job right the first time saves contractors time and money,” Mr Jennings said.

“Contractors that come to a BSA/Construction Skills Queensland seminar will be able to avoid common building pitfalls by learning about best practice methods and new standards and regulations.

“Topics include rainwater tank installation, BSA’s dispute resolution process, site supervision, waterproofing, fire protection and subsidence.

The seminars are run by the Building Services Authority (BSA) and Construction Skills Queensland (CSQ) throughout Queensland, from Bundaberg to Bamaga and many places in between.

All building contractors are welcome to attend, including BSA licensees, employees and subcontractors. Light refreshments will be served, and attendees receive a free information kit.

For more information or to RSVP, visit www.bsa.qld.gov.au or call 1300 BSA BSA.
