Home Access Information Trial

The Queensland Department of Housing and the Real Estate Institute of Queensland are running a Home Access Information trial throughout the greater Brisbane area. The trial encourages real estate agents to identify and promote homes for sale or rent with access features.

Homes with access features include having at least one entry into the home with no more than three steps and a level access between and within all living areas. Further information on the trial is available on the department's website:

The website hosts a range of fact sheets and also contains a list of participating agents.
