Mackay consumers beware

Minister for Public Works, Housing and Information and Communication Technologies, Robert Swarten, warns consumers in the Mackay region against engaging the services of Mr Joseph Ronald Gass.

On 20 June 2006 the Queensland Building Services Authority (BSA) cancelled the pool building licence of Mr Gass after investigations revealed Mr Gass was not performing works diligently, was not obtaining building approvals, was refusing to rectify defects and owed money to subcontractors and suppliers.

“This company is unable to perform any construction work, which includes the signing of contracts or the taking of deposits relating to the installation of pools or carrying out any installation work,” said Mr Swarten.

“BSA has received reports that Mr Gass is still operating in the Mackay area. This is obviously a cause for concern and we warn consumers, subcontractors and suppliers not to engage Mr Gass to perform any work. Any details of Mr Gass’ current building activities in the area should be reported to the BSA for investigation.”

General manager of the BSA, Ian Jennings, advises that, under the Queensland Building Services Authority Act 1991, all builders, building designers and trade contractors must be licensed to carry out building work.

“All building work performed in Queensland and valued in excess of $1,100, must be carried out by a licensed contractor or by an owner builder. We recommend the use of a licensed contractor even for small jobs, because the licence indicates that the contractor has met certain minimum standards which will result in the consumer getting a better job done. Always ask to sight their BSA licence card and if they can’t show you their licence card... show them the door,” he said
